An Insurance Curiosity.

"Did you ever stop to consider," asked Lemuel Hunter, "why it is that when a man is burned out he always overestimates his loss about 200 per cent? This is more particularly the case with fires in frame building towns, where the loss to the building is generally assessed at between three and four times what it cost to erect it. I raised this question not long since with a man who was burned out. He said the loss to his building was $2,000, but he proposed to rebuild at an expenditure of $1,500 and have a better building. When I questioned the logic of his calculation, he promptly corrected me by pointing out that the real estate on which the building stood was worth fully $2,000, and although he didn't pretend to argue that the site had been burned up he seemed to think himself perfectly justified in including the value of the 25 feet frontage by his estimate of loss. No one was injured by the calculation, and the good man was perfectly justified in making it if he desired, but if his idea is a general one it is surprising that losses generally are greatly overestimated."—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

When the World Falls to Pieces.

The leading English scientists, Jones, Hilton, et al., are figuring on the probabilities of the earth finally collapsing as a result of the modern craze for tapping nature's great gas reservoirs. They argue that the earth is a large balloon held up in part at least, by heat and internal gases, and that when nature's great gas main is eventually exhausted the earth's crust may break in and fall into millions of fragments. Ugh! The very thought of such a calamity is startling. They argue that the steady belching forth of millions of feet of gas every hour of the day and night is surely causing a great vacuum somewhere not far beneath the surface, and that sooner or later the thin archway of earth crust will give way. Then will occur the grand climax of all earthly calamities.—St. Louis Republic.

Would Abolish the Ten Commandments. Once, when being heckled during an election, a man suddenly shouted from the gallery, "What is Mr. Merry's opinion of the decalogue?" The candidate, turning to his agent, whom he always kept handy at such times, asked, "What on earth does the fellow mean by the decalogue?" The agent explained that the man probably meant something about Sunday trains and Sunday traveling, upon which the candidate replied to his questioner as follows: "I beg to inform my friend in the gallery that so far as I am concerned I would abolish the decalogue altogether."—Leeds (England) Mercury.

A Room in Buckingham Palace. One's respect for the accommodations at Buckingham palace is considerably enhanced to read that over 300 women waiting to be presented to the queen were gathered in the apartment adjoining the throne room on the last drawing room. When it is recalled that each of these women was accompanied by her court train, or rather that each accompanied her court train, it is seen how noble must be the dimensions of a room to accommodate 200 women and 200 court trains.—Exchange.

The denuding of the mountains of France of their covering of trees has caused destructive torrents to sweep over the neighboring plains, laying waste rich agricultural lands and producing immense losses.

On retiring let the air into the room by pulling down the window a short distance from the top and raising it equally from the bottom. This permits that free circulation most beneficial to health.

A "T" will work wonders if properly applied. It makes bough bought, turns here to there, makes tone out of one and transforms the phrase "allow his own" into "tallow this town."

that you can secure almost immediate relief from Indigestion, and that uncomfortable fullness after meals, by simply taking a dose of Simmons Liver Regulator? Some people think that because it is called Liver Regulator it has nothing to do with Indigestion and the like. It is the inaction of the Liver that causes Indigestion, and that fullness; also Constipation, and those Bilious Headaches. Millions have been made to understand this and have been cured from these troubles by Simmons Liver Regulator—a medicine unflinching and purely vegetable.

From Rev. M. E. Wharton, Baltimore, Md.

THE PURCHASE OF SILVER.

The Sherman act of July, 1890, directs the secretary of the treasury to purchase, from time to time, silver bullion to the aggregate amount of 4,500,000 ounces, or so much thereof as may be offered in each month, at the market price thereof not exceeding one dollar for 371 1/4 grains of pure silver, and to issue in payment for such purchases of silver bullion treasury notes of the United States.

In the month of July just ended, for the first time since the passage of the act, failed to purchase the amount authorized by the act, the total purchase for the month being 2,384,000 ounces, or 2,116,000 less than the law provides. In July the market price of silver bullion was less than ever before in the history of the world, and the full amount authorized to be purchased was offered at this low price, yet the treasury department saw fit not to purchase it. The excuse for non-compliance with the law is that the price at which the bullion was offered to the government was a fraction of a cent higher than the London price. The law does not require the treasury department to be governed in its purchases by the market price in London and it does seem that the price established in New York for a product that is almost wholly American, ought to govern its purchase by the government.

The only benefit derived by the country from the purchase of 4,500,000 ounces of silver monthly, is to furnish a market for that much bullion, and increase the amount of money in circulation by issuing treasury notes therefor, now, at a time when silver bullion is lower than it was ever known to be and money scarcer than ever before, the government for the first time since the passage of the act, fails to relieve the silver market or the financial stringency, by purchasing the full amount of bullion required by law. Whether justly or otherwise this action of the treasury is construed to mean that the department will not do anything at the present time to relieve the stringency, but in fact places the narrowest possible construction on an act of congress to prevent such relief.

The general impression is that congress is to be convened in extra session for the express purpose of repealing the Sherman act. Every goldbug paper in the United States insists that the first act of the national legislature must be the repeal of that law. Now, it is asked, if the treasury department can nullify that act at pleasure by not complying with its requirements, why convene congress in extra session to repeal it? If, as is alleged by the gold men, the purchase of 4,500,000 ounces of silver monthly is the cause of the money stringency and bullion depression, the action of the treasury department in July should have afforded relief. The reports from all parts of the country, however, show that it had the contrary effect, as more banks suspended, more business houses assigned, more factories closed and more people were thrown out of employment than in any previous month in the history of the country.

THE SITUATION IN DENVER.

The authorities of Denver, Colorado, established what they called Camp Relief, where workmen who were thrown out of employment by the closing of mines, smelters and factories were fed. They also prevailed upon the railroads to run free trains east for the accommodation of those who desired to leave the mountains and seek employment in the agricultural states of the Mississippi valley. Camp Relief has become the headquarters for all the professional tramps along the railroads. They eat the food and occupy the tents, prepared for the unemployed workmen and a free ride to the Missouri river, does not tempt them to leave. They thought they had a soft thing for the summer and decided to make the most of it. Now the state and county officials have decided to abolish Camp Relief and neither meals nor beds will be furnished its occupants after to-morrow. The officials have advised the railroads to stop the free ride system and henceforth they will charge full fare. The city and county will appropriate money to give employment to all who desire to work and those who will not work must provide for themselves.

This arrangement will compel the tramps who congregated at Denver to suffer and doubtless many of them will find their way west. They are disgusted with the change of affairs and as they will not work under any circumstances they will be compelled to leave Denver or starve.

CRISP'S POSITION.

The goldbug press reiterates the assertion that Congressman Crisp cannot be elected speaker of the house next week without a contest and possibly not at all, if he does not conform to what are believed to be the views of the administration on the silver question. Equally well-informed correspondents say that Mr. Crisp, while not inviting antagonism, has paid no attention to what gold men say. When elected speaker he will undoubtedly organize the committee in conformity with the national Democratic platform. He will, therefore, not pack the committee on coinage in the interest of the unconditional repeal of the silver law. The correspondents say that a careful canvass of the members of the house show that a bill repealing the Sherman act unconditionally cannot pass that body even upon administrative pressure, and the election of a speaker opposed to the re-monetization of silver is an impossibility.

THE SILVER CONVENTION

The Largest Assemblage of the Kind Ever Held.

THURMAN OF OHIO PRESIDENT

Rousing Speeches—Stirring Resolutions for Free Coinage.

CHICAGO, August 2.—The Silver convention to-day had to get new quarters to accommodate the large attendance and it met in Masonic hall.

A. C. THURMAN, PRESIDENT, Called the convention to order. A resolution by Daugherty of Texas to appoint a committee of one from each state to devise a plan for impressing upon congress and the people of the United States the impending peril, threatening ruin to the national interests of which we have only had a foretaste, was referred to the committee on resolutions, after discussion.

EX-SENATOR HILL OF COLORADO Addressed the convention on the silver question. His arguments were chiefly based on statistics tending to show that the adoption of the gold standard in any country was invariably followed by decades of poverty and depression. He said the divergence between the value of gold and silver was now greater than when the United States commission made its famous report, and no boundary can be set to the divergence that may be reached hereafter, especially if the foremost silver producing country in the world shall lend itself to the attempt being made to establish a universal gold standard. The scarcity of gold had nothing to do with the present depression. The amount of money now locked up and hidden away was more than double the amount of gold now in the country. The supposition that by repealing the Sherman act thus and bringing on a great fall in the price of the metal, we could change Europe into a bimetallic treaty was a delusion. If we are driven by the conspiracy to revert to a single standard we should by all means use silver. If we restore silver to its old place as a money metal by unlimited coinage, and if, under force of circumstances over which we have no control, our gold should be drained away, we will still maintain the first position among the nations of the world and compel England, Germany and France to at once adopt bimetalism.

In conclusion he declared that if western Europe perseveres in measures which raise the value of gold so it shall flow from the United States and we become a silver country, we will be carried to a pitch of prosperity transcending all the past, and western Europe will be plunged in an abyss of ruin.

At the conclusion of Hill's address Hon. J. R. Doolittle of Wisconsin presented a resolution declaring it the duty of congress to coin both gold and silver in such ratio of weight that the dollar in a silver dollar shall equal in value the dollar in a gold dollar. Referred to the committee on resolutions.

CONGRESSMAN F. G. NEWLANDS Of Nevada followed in an address reviewing congressional legislation on the silver question. England, he said, was the greatest gold owning power in the world. We owe her $600,000,000 in gold, which she can call for any day. If the draft for a hundred millions recently made worked such disaster in this country, what would it do if she called for the whole lot? England had the gold of the world and knew how to legislate for her interests. We have the silver of the world and do not know our own interests. As the tax on tea led to our political independence, the present blow at silver might lead to our financial independence.

UNITED STATES SENATOR ALLEN Of Nebraska produced much enthusiasm by a brief but stirring speech in which he pledged the People's party to the cause of silver. The Populists in the senate would not be found wanting in support of free coinage at the ratio of 1 to 16.

He was followed by Hon. C. S. Thomas of Colorado. In a brief speech he declared that gold and silver were the money of history and civilization. The avarice of man had declared an artificial and infamous divorce between the metals. Silver men were called lunatics and cranks, but they were proposing merely to return to a system hallowed by the history of 4,000 years.

Recess until 2 P. M.

THE COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS This afternoon submitted a long report. The preamble recites that bimetalism is as ancient as human history, and for certain more than 3,000 years. Gold and silver came down through the ages hand in hand, their relations having varied but a few points in all that time and then almost invariably through legislation; that both the metals named together were indissolubly united in the constitution of the United States as the money basis of this country; that in 1873, without previous demand of any political party or any part of the people, and without public discussion, silver was stricken from the place it occupied since the days of Abraham and Pharo under circumstances of such secrecy, A. G. Thurman, W. M. Stewart, D. W. Voorhees, J. G. Blaine (then speaker of the house), J. A. Garfield and other members of congress voting for the bill and subsequently publicly declaring they did not know until long afterwards that so great a change had been made in our financial system; that the debates in congress showed that the measure was partly ascribed to one Ernest Seyd, a London banker, who, it is claimed, was sent to Washington by the moneyed classes of the old world to secure its passage by secret and corrupt means; that President Grant, who signed the bill, declared long subsequently that he did not know.

IT DEMONETIZED SILVER; That the object of this attack on silver was to double the purchasing power of gold, thus reducing the price of all commodities, arresting enterprise, impoverishing the toiler and degrading mankind; that the awful consequences of this act are now upon the whole world and the west is in the midst of unparalleled distress and in the shadows of impending calamities beyond estimate is ruling the industry of the people who inhabit one-third of the area of this Republic has been stricken down, property values destroyed, workmen compelled to fly as from a pestilence honest toilers numbering hundreds of thousands thrown out of employment to eat the bread of poverty or starve. The products of industries from the workshop are depreciated in price until production ceases to be profitable, the money of the country is inadequate for the business, and has gravitated to the banks, while the people, distrusting the banks, demand their deposits to hide or hoard; mercantile houses are going to the wall by thousands every day because the masses have not the means to buy even the necessities of life; the movement of great crops being gathered demand a vast amount of currency, which the banks are unable to furnish.

CLAMORING FOR THE REPEAL OF THE SHERMAN ACT.

In the midst of these conditions the daily press is clamoring for the repeal of the Sherman act, although its repeal means the stoppage of the issue of more than three million dollars in money every month, ignoring the fact that to hold the balance level between the debtor and creditor factions the supply of currency must increase with the increased population and business; the growth of population of 33 per cent every ten years, and the increase of business is far more greater.

The preamble then quotes at length from the utterances of James G. Blaine, Daniel Webster and Secretary Carlisle in favor of bimetallic currency, and Hon John Sherman on the dangers of a monetary contraction.

DENOUNCING UNCONDITIONAL REPEAL.

The time has come when the politics of the nation should revert as far as possible to the simple and pure condition out of which the republic arose. We suggest for the consideration of our fellow citizens that a refusal of the opponents of bimetalism to propose any substitute for the present law or elaborate any plan for the future, indicates either ignorance of our financial needs or unwillingness to take the public into their confidence, and we denounce the attempt to unconditionally repeal the Sherman law as an attempt to secure gold monometalism in a flagrant violation of the last national platform of all political parties.

Tom Johnston, the gentlemanly pugilist of Marysville, is in town on his way to the world's fair.

J. H. Lathrop and M. H. Day, who are on the coast in the interest of New York and Chicago capitalists, seeking investments in mining properties, came in from Quincy last evening. They have succeeded in making several extensive purchases in Plumas county and are on their return home. They are highly elated over their purchases and are sure there is a brilliant future for Plumas county.

AN INSTRUCTIVE DIALOGUE.

Conversation Between a Bondholder and a Bankrupt.

Bondholder—Well, Mr. Bankrupt, your property, lacked some fifty per cent, of paying the amount of the mortgage and interest. I shall be obliged to advertise you to the world as a man that does not pay his honest debts.

Bankrupt—I concede the fact, Mr. Bondholder, that I am completely in your power as far as my financial reputation is concerned, but I am very thankful for the liberality of our government which does not allow a man to be imprisoned for debt.

B. H.—You should consider yourself extremely fortunate that I did not take satisfaction out of your hide for the remaining fifty per cent, which you still owe me. I would advise you to go to Africa and prospect for a gold mine or a diamond field. You could beat your way to some seaport and then get stowed away in the hold of some vessel that was bound for Africa. Some lucky find, might enable you to pay the balance of the note and interest. I will keep accurate account of the interest and keep you posted so you can remit the amount at your earliest opportunity.

B.—I would like to know, Mr. Bondholder how much interest I have paid you during the past thirty years?

B. H.—Let me see, thirty years ago I took your note for one thousand dollars, the rate of interest was very high, I charged you three per cent, per month payable yearly in advance. I counted out a thousand dollars, figured the year's interest which left $640, for you, a $1,000 note and $360 for me. The first ten years you paid me $3,600 interest, then I reduced the rate of interest to two per cent per month, the following ten years you paid me $2,400 interest, again I kindly reduced the rate of interest to one and one-half per cent per month, and the last ten years you only paid me $1,800 interest or a total for the thirty years of $7,800.

B.—Or in other words for the use of $400 for thirty years I have actually paid you $7,800 in interest, and you caught me in a tight place when money was exceedingly tight, forced me to the wall, confiscated my property which two years ago was worth ten times the amount of the debt, and now you brand me as a man that does not pay his honest debts, and advise me to beat my way to Africa to try my luck looking for gold nuggets and diamonds so you can continue to fleece me.

B. H.—Hold on Mr. Bankrupt, you should be very careful how you talk about being fleeced. Our government realizing the sacredness of a contract has always assisted in enforcing the demands of the bondholder and will not allow any debtor to trifle with his obligations. The government owes a debt of gratitude to the bondholders for saving the union, which it can never repay.

B.—I have heard you talk before about the patriotic moneyed men that came to the rescue of the government in its hour of peril, but I will tell you some plain truths about their patriotism that will cast a shadow on that claim. At the outbreak of the war these patriotic moneyed men withdrew all the gold available from circulation. They felt sure they were going to reap a most bountiful harvest, the government, they thought must have their gold at any cost. But the government was equal to the emergency and issued $80,000,000 of greenbacks, which were made full legal tender for all debts. There were no exceptions placed on this money, it commanded respect among bankers and merchants, wholesale importers and money sharks, all recognized that the government had discovered a way to prosecute the war without the aid of the gold kings. But the holders of the gold were not to be trifled with. They entered into a conspiracy to force the government to use their gold, and at an enormous profit to themselves. How well they succeeded is recorded in the fact that the next issue of greenbacks had the exception clause inserted. They were not satisfied with making a market for their gold at the ratio of about three dollars for one, but they must have another act passed to not only make the interest payable in gold, but it must be paid in advance. Now their harvest commenced. The wholesale importers were obliged to buy gold of these patriotic money lenders. They gave about three dollars in greenbacks for one of gold. The wholesale importer paid the gold to the government for the custom duties. Then the patriotic money kings, boiling over with patriotism, invested their greenbacks in government bonds, collected the gold interest in advance, and were again ready for the wholesale importer. This process was repeated as rapidly as the circumstances would permit. These patriotic gold kings were laying the foundation for a colossal fortune that was to repay them for their devotion to the old flag. But it was such an immense affair they had some doubts about their powers of absorbing wealth being equal to the occasion, so they invited a few of the money sharks of Europe to come to the rescue and help save the union.

How well they succeeded is now shown in the rapid manner in which they are taking possession of the property in this country in settlement of the interest on securities they already hold. These European shysters very ably assisted our own money sharks in the passage of the act demonetizing silver; also the refunding act and the strengthening the public credit act, and now they propose to assist to the extent of their ability, aided by a little coin, in passing another act which they say will again strengthen our credit abroad and enable us to borrow what gold we need to meet our interest obligations to the foreign bondholders.

B. H.—Stop right where you are; no bankrupt will be allowed to cast reproach on the bondholders in my presence. I tell you us moneyed men were the salvation of this union, and it is an act of base ingratitude for such men as you, who were financially assisted in their hour of need, to impugn the motives of these benevolent bondholders. Congress should enact a law at its present session to suppress all such incendiary language as was lately indulged in by such men as Congressman Bryan, the Reverend Myron Reed and Governor Waite. Such language has already seriously impaired our credit abroad, and I have grave doubts about our government being able to float $800,000,000 of 4 per cent gold bonds in Europe unless we allow the Rothschilds to name a financial dictator whose word will be the supreme law of the land. The bondholders are in no mood to be trifled with and if it becomes necessary we will starve you and your associates to submission. That plan has succeeded in Europe; it will also succeed here. As I have an engagement with my private secretary who is having trouble in collecting the interest on some of my railroad securities, I will have to bring this discussion to an abrupt termination, but remember I want you to rustle up the balance of what you owe me as quick as possible.

DEATH OF JAMES H. WARD.

The Testimony and the Verdict of the Coroner's Jury.

Coroner Brown held an inquest upon the body of James H. Ward, whose tragic death occurred at the county hospital Tuesday morning. Following is substantially the testimony elicited from the several witnesses examined at the inquest:

Dr. Phillips was the first witness examined, and said: "I started to visit a patient across the river when I met Mr. Ayer coming from the hospital, who told me that Ward was injured at the hospital and did not know but that he was dead, and requested me to go there and ascertain his condition. I did so and found Ward at the west end of the back porch dead. I made an examination and found at the end of the railing a very sharp corner, also an iron strap at the bottom that projected. From the position of the body and the marks on the hat I concluded that the injury might have occurred by falling on the iron, as stated to me by Mr. Perkins. Afterward at the hospital I saw the coroner take a bottle of whiskey from the side pocket of the deceased. Myself and W. A. Phillips made a post mortem examination and found on the left side of the head an injury made by coming in contact with some hard substance; also a fracture at the base of the skull on the left side, which probably produced death by hemorrhage."

Charles Perkins, an inmate of the hospital, testified that the affair took place a little before 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. That he was called from the kitchen and on going out saw Mr. Ayer and Mr. Wood facing each other on the veranda, and as he advanced toward them both were using high language. He saw Mr. Ayer give Ward a push in the face, when he (Perkins) instantly stepped between the two men and separated them to a distance of fully three feet, and in this position entreated both not to cause any more trouble. Ward was leaning on the guard rail of the veranda viciously answering back to Mr. Ayer, who was telling Ward to leave the place. The men stood in this position for about a minute or two when Ward released his right hand from the guard rail as if to use it, when his right leg gave away under him and he fell, grazing the right side of his face against the post and striking with terrific force on the hard floor of the veranda on the back of his head. Perkins immediately bent over to Ward to see if he was hurt and saw in his right side pocket the handle of a dagger, and immediately withdrew it from the pocket and placed it in his own. (Here the witness identified the knife). At the time of the trouble Ward was under the influence of liquor. Witness stated that at the moment Ward fell he (the witness) was standing between Ward and Ayer looking at Ward, and stated positively that Ayer did not strike or push Ward at the time Ward fell.

John T. Pollard saw Ayer come home, hitch his horse and walk up to Ward and say, "Get out of here," and commence pushing him. Saw Ward standing by the post of the veranda a few moments and then fall heavily on his back. He also identified the knife.

John Hoy saw Ward the evening before the tragedy take a large knife from the room of another patient and put it in his pocket, and identified the knife in court as being the one Ward took.

Just as the inquest was about to close R. S. Stone asked to be heard and was sworn. Said he was an inmate of the hospital and witnessed the tragedy. Was standing on the porch. Ward was on the porch and Mr. Ayer on the outside. Ward said to Mr. Ayer, "I have come to get my things." Ayer said, "If you don't get out of here I will murder you," and the next thing the witness knew he saw Mr. Ayer step up to Ward and strike him in the face; thinks there was three blows. At the third blow Ward fell back on the porch on the back of his head and died in a few moments.

In reply to a question the coroner informed the jury that he did not believe the evidence sufficient to warrant the holding of Mr. Ayer on a criminal charge and advised his exoneration. The jury thereupon retired and soon after returned the following verdict:

RENO, NEV., August 2, 1893.

We, the undersigned jurors summoned to appear before H. P. Brown, coroner, at the coroner's office in the town of Reno, on the 2d day of August, 1893, to inquire into the cause of the death of James H. Ward, having been duly sworn according to law, and having made such inquiry, and after inspecting the body and hearing the testimony adduced, upon our oaths each and all do say that we find that the name of the deceased was James H. Ward, a native of New York, aged about 65 years, and that he came to his death on the 1st day of August, 1893, in this county by the rupture of a blood vessel produced by falling on the back of his head; and further find that we believe Mr. Ayer to be the person by whose acts the death of said James H. Ward occurred. All of which we duly certify by this inquisition in writing by us signed this 2d of August, 1893.

Asthma. "I have been a great sufferer from Asthma and severe Colds every Winter, and last Fall my friends as well as myself thought because of my feeble condition, and great distress from constant coughing, and inability to raise any of the accumulated matter from my lungs, that my time was close at hand. When nearly worn out for want of sleep and rest, a friend recommended me to try thy valuable medicine, Boschee's German Syrup. I am confident it saved my life. Almost the first dose gave me great relief and a gentle refreshing sleep, such as I had not had for weeks. My cough began immediately to loosen and pass away, and I found myself rapidly gaining in health and weight. I am pleased to inform thee—unsolicited—that I am in excellent health and do certainly attribute it to thy Boschee's German Syrup. C. B. STICKNEY, Picton, Ontario."

WHEN HE BROUGHT THE BLACK SILK.

The One Thing in Life For Which Mrs. Young Longed Came Too Late.

It was no very exacting ambition that Robert Young's mother had cherished all her life. She lived very quietly on the western prairie farm to which she and her husband had gone together when they were both young. She did not expect to be rich or even think about it. She was content with the homely round of her daily life. Sometimes her husband used to say that if they had only happened to go here or there, where some of the friends of his youth had found copper or silver, or struck oil, they might have been worth millions, but the wife always answered: "It wasn't to be, John; it wasn't to be. And we've done pretty well, as things go, but I should like one good black silk dress."

This was the only wish that Robert Young had ever heard his mother express, and he used to say to himself when he was a boy:

"Bless the dear mother! She shall have it the very first money I earn."

Robert's father, too, planned in his own mind the same thing, but one year the harvest turned out badly, and another the children had diphtheria, and so it was that the good black silk dress never came.

It was a strange thing that the son of John and Rachel Young should have been an artist. But Robert began to draw before he could write, and at last he got hold of a box of colors through the kindness of one of his Sunday school teachers, and then he made pictures that dazzled the eyes of his prairie neighbors.

As he grew older he got orders for portraits from proud parents who were willing to give $5 for a daughter's or a son's likeness, and he saved these small sums until by the time he was 18 he had enough money to take him to Boston, where he hoped to find a good teacher and to do something really worth while.

His struggle in the city was hard enough to begin with. Every snowstorm was a friend to him, for whoever he shivered off steps and sidewalks they were sure to want him again, he did his work so cheerfully and so well.

He paid for his lessons by taking care of the studio of the artist under whom he studied. He was ready to do any honest thing to earn an honest penny, and at last, even in Boston, people found out that he had a special talent of his own and began to buy his pictures.

There were so many things at first to do with the money that he earned. To must have a little studio of his own where people could come, and it would not answer for the artist who had his own studio to live like the youth who used to shovel off sidewalks. He did not forget the good black silk dress or the mother who was to wear it; he only waited.

At last came a spring when he had been fairly prosperous, and he planned to go home for his mother's birthday in August and to carry the dress with him, but just then he received an invitation that flattered him. His former teacher was going to Ipswich for a summer of sketching and asked Robert to go with him.

It seemed an opportunity too good to be lost. So he went to Ipswich, and the summer flew by as if on wings, and Robert did not go home in August; he only wrote a letter.

It was October before he started for the far-off prairie farm. Once on his way, he hurried forward by night and day until he reached the little station that was nearest to his home. He had written when he should arrive, but he did not see his father waiting for him as he had expected. He felt a momentary sense of injury, but just then an old neighbor came up.

"I s'pose you might as well ride home 'long with me," he said. "I told 'em I'd fetch ye, as long as yer pa couldn't."

"Couldn't? Why?"

"Waal, I sorter hate to tell ye, but yer mother, she had a shock or palsy yesterday, and yer father don't like ter leave her jest yet."

There was a strange choking in Robert Young's throat. The good black silk dress was in his valise, but he had brought it too late.—Youth's Companion.

The Riches of Uninhabited Nicaragua.

Mr. J. Crawford, a well known resident of Managua, has just completed a tour covering about 15,000 square miles of territory of the republic of Nicaragua.

Mr. Crawford reports that the uninhabited central mountainous part of the country is very rich in agricultural lands, excellent for raising coffee, tobacco, grapes, almonds, corn, potatoes, vegetables, sugar cane, rice, cocoa, indigo, plantains, mangoes, oranges, limes, lemons, bananas, etc. In the forests are to be found mahogany, cedar, rosewood, walnut, india rubber, nispero, guano, etc. Its lakes are rich in gold and silver, while large deposits of marble, granite and magnesian limestone are to be found.—Panama Star.

An Easter Surprise For the Czar.

Emperor Alexander found a short time since in a photographic album on his writing table a picture of the famous nihilist countess Sophie Perovskina, who was hanged with the murderers of Alexander II. It is now stated that at Easter the czar received another disagreeable surprise. In his room at Livadia he found an exquisitely painted Easter egg. Inside it was a small silver dagger, two ivory carved death's heads and a slip of paper on which were these words: "Christ is risen. We also shall rise again!" In spite of all endeavors the secret police have not succeeded in finding out where either the portrait or the egg came from.—London News.

Not Entirely Definite.

James McCrabb, a resident of Fairbank, left a will when he died which was remarkably brief, but not clear enough to avoid litigation. One bequest of $700 was left to "James Kelly of somewhere near New York." The master in ordinary has ordered to advertise and discover if possible the man for whom the money is intended.—Toronto Mail.

BALD HEADS!

What is the condition of your hair? Is it harsh, brittle? Does it split at the ends? Has it a lifeless appearance? Does it fall out when combed or brushed? Is it full of dandruff? Does your scalp itch? Is it dry or in a heated condition? If there are some of your symptoms here, you will become bald.

Is what you need. Its production is not a secret, but the result of scientific research. Knowledge of the disease of the hair and scalp led to the discovery of how to treat them. "Skookum" contains neither minerals nor oil. It is not a dye, but a delicately cooling and refreshing tonic. By stimulating the follicles, it stops falling hair, cures dandruff and grows hair on bald heads.

Keep the scalp clean, healthy, and free from irritating eruptions, by the use of Skookum Skin Soap. It destroys parasitic insects, which feed on and destroy the hair.

If you doubt, send supply you send direct to us, and we will forward prepaid, on receipt of price. Growers, $1.00 per bottle; 6 for $5.00. Soap, 50c. per box, for $2.50.

A Birmingham (England) oracle assures us that it has followed almost without exception in the past 30 years that a cold spring has been followed by a cold, wet summer, as in 1861, 1877 and 1879, and that a hot spring has been followed by a hot, dry summer, as in 1863, 1868, 1870 and 1873. From this he deduces the probability that this summer will be one of the hottest and driest and thirstiest on record.

A Dress Suit at a Swell Breakfast. At the mayor's reception to the infant there was only one break, and strangely enough it was made by President Higginbotham of the World's Columbian exposition. Mr. Higginbotham came for breakfast at 11 o'clock in evening dress, and the sight of him Mr. Hobart Chaffield-Taylor almost collapsed.—Chicago Dispatch.

A Spot of Oil in the Sea. Ten miles south of the Sabine river and a mile off shore is a natural phenomenon known to sailors as "The Oil Spot." No visible boundary divides it from the open sea around, but even during a storm, even though the waters become red and turbid, they remain comparatively calm.—St. Louis Republic.

Railroad Etiquette. Mr. Cumso—You should never ask a railroad man if the train is on time. Mrs. Cumso—But suppose I want to know? Mr. Cumso—In that case ask him how much late it is.—Truth.

APOSTROPHE OF TIME.

Aspirant start on the winging flight, How full the world and all its monuments of earthly grandeur! 'Neath thy rude hand all pleasures flee away And happy yesterday turns dull today! Sweetest joy becomes the salt of sorrow In continuation of the stern tomorrow. Oh, stay awhile and help me brush away In this wretched world the dross of yesterday! Well, then, so chase yourself! Begone!—Avant!

A Cure For Stammering. A gentleman who stammered from childhood almost up to manhood gives a very simple remedy for the misfortune. Go into a room where you will be quiet and alone, get some book that will interest but not excite you and sit down and read two hours aloud to yourself, keeping your teeth together. Do this every two or three days, or once a week if very tiresome, always taking care to read slowly and distinctly, moving the lips but not the teeth. Then, when conversing with others try to speak as slowly and distinctly as possible and make up your mind that you will not stammer.

Well, I tried this remedy, not having much faith in it. I must confess, but willing to do almost anything to cure myself of such an annoying difficulty I read for two hours aloud with my teeth together. The first result was to make my tongue and jaws ache—that is, while I was reading—and the next to make me feel as if something had loosened my talking apparatus, for I could speak with less difficulty immediately. The change was so great that every one who knew me remarked it. I repeated this remedy every five or six days for a month, and then at longer intervals until cured.—Cure Weekly.

In Glass. That's the way Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets come. And it's a more important point than you think. It keeps them always fresh and reliable, unlike the ordinary pill in cheap wooden or pasteboard boxes.

They're put up in a better way and they act in a better way, than the huge old-fashioned pills. No griping, no violence, no reaction afterward that sometimes leaves you worse off than before. In that way they cure permanently. Sick Headache, Biliousness, Indigestion, Constipation, and all derangements of the liver, stomach, and bowels, are prevented relieved and cured.

They're tiny, sugar-coated granules, a compound of refined and concentrated vegetable extracts—the smallest in size, the easiest to take, and the cheapest pill you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. You pay only for the good you get.

There's nothing likely to be just as good.
